If the lump sum is earnings as defined by the CCPA, does your state limit the withholding to a greater degree than the CCPA limitation?	Yes, California limits the withholding to a greater degree than the CCPA limitation on any non-court ordered earnings with-holding order. Except as provided by the court, the maximum withholding is 50% of the net disposable earnings under California Code of Civil Procedure Section 706.052(a). "Net disposable earnings" means earnings that is subject to withholding after making mandatory deductions for taxes including State, federal, local, Social Security, Medicare taxes and union dues, along with deductions for disability insurance and payments to public employees' retirement systems, provided that the deductions are required as a condition of employment. (22 California Code of Regulations Section 110280) Note: A court ordered IWO is limited by Code of Civil Procedure Section 706.052(c) to the limit under Section 1673 of Title 15 of the US Code.
If the lump sum is not earnings as defined by the CCPA, does your state limit the withholding/attachment?	If the lump sum does not involve "earnings," then the lump sum would be subject to a 100% levy attachment depending on arrears amount owed. For example, a lump sum involving a civil judgment award not involving earnings would be subject to the maximum 100% attachment. Note: payments to independent contractors are subject to the maximum 50% net disposable earnings withholding limit.

How long must the employer hold the lump sum?	Normal remitting rules apply - Colorado requires that payments be remitted within 7 days from the date of withholding
Is the IWO used for lump sums?	Yes
Are other processes or document(s) used to attach lump sums?	Garnishment
If the lump sum is earnings as defined by the CCPA, does your state limit the withholding to a greater degree than the CCPA limitation?	Colorado law relating to maximum child support income withholding (§13-54-104, C.R.S.) exactly copies the CCPA limits: 50% to 65% of disposable earnings based on age of arrears and whether the obligor is supporting other dependents. However, in lump sum payment situations, as a matter of policy, Colorado Division of Child Support Enforcement defaults to the lowest of the maximum limits, 50%, to make the process as easy as possible for employers.
If the lump sum is not earnings as defined by the CCPA, does your state limit the withholding/attachment?	Colorado law provides a very broad and comprehensive description of earnings (§13-54-104, C.R.S. and §14-14-102, C.R.S.) so, there is no situation where the lump sum payment paid by an employer would not be considered "earnings" and therefore, the CCPA income withholding limits as reflected in Colorado law always would apply.

Are employers required to report lump sums? Cite the state law for lump sums	No
What is the threshold amount for lump sum to be reported?	There is no State law that establishes any threshold amount.
How long must the employer hold the lump sum?	There is no specified period that an employer must hold income - but if the employer is in possession of such income when the wage withholding order was issued to it, then can be made to pay that amount from it own moneys. If the employer receives a Notice of Intent to Lien prior to remitting any lump sum to the employee, it is required to hold those funds up to the amount of arrears alleged in the notice until it receives a court order discharging the Lien - or a discharge from the State agency with respect to the Lein.
Is the IWO used for lump sums?	No
Are other processes or document(s) used to attach lump sums?	Yes, Lien and Levy form or Court ordered Lien
If the lump sum is earnings as defined by the CCPA, does your state limit the withholding to a greater degree than the CCPA limitation?	No
If the lump sum is not earnings as defined by the CCPA, does your state limit the withholding/attachment?	No, Rhode Island's withholding statutes (Title 15 Chapter 16) subjects both types of 'earnings' and 'income,' as defined below to be subject to withholding. (15-16-2(6)(i) and (ii)). Our state law, at 15-16-2(6) subjects all of the defined "earnings" and "income" below to be equally subjected to wage withholding to the extent such "is (not) prohibited by federal law." Thus, the only limitation in Rhode Island is whatever federal law provides. Indeed, 15-16-5(a)(2) specifically provides that withholding shall occur except that "the amounts withheld...may not exceed the limit permitted under (Section) 303(b) of the (federal) Consumer Credit Protection Act, 15 U.S.C. 1673(b)."
